Report of Chief of Staff.

General W. E. Mickle, adjutant-general and chief of staff, has completed his annual report, which is highly interesting. It says:

"It is a source of sincerest pleasure to me that I a mable to report that the debt which has been resting on the federation for a number of years has been paid in full. That this matter has been liquidated is due to the extraordinary efforts put forth by you; and while the urgent appeal made by you to the wealthiest members of our order was sent to nearly three hundred people and should have had most generous responses, the amount realized was barely sufficient to wipe out the debt. This lukewarmness on the part of those who were in a position to respond most liberally is a sad commentary on the degeneracy of the times and displays a deplorable lack of interest by men who were once so ready to share the dangers and deprivations that rendered the Confederate armies famous throughout the world.

"There have been carried on the roster of the order for a number of years many camps who had not made payment of any kind since they were chartered; some of these were really never in existence, having died a-borning. After conferring with the adjutant generals of the various divisions, these camps have been put on the 'dormant list,' and no mail matter will, for the present, be sent them. This means a considerable annual saving to the order. There are still on the roster a number of camps who do not contribute to the finances of the order, make re-

JOSEPH, ARCHDUKE OF AUSTRIA, DEAD

Was Much Beloved By Hungarian People, Among Whom He Was Brought Up.

(By Associated Press.)
VIENNA, June 13.—Archduke Joseph, of Austria, died to-day.

VIENNA, June 12 Archduke Joseph, of Austria, died to-day.

Joseph Charles Louis, Archduke of Austria and Royal Prince of Hungary, was born at Pressbourg, Hungary, March 25, 232. He had always been known as the "Hungarian Archduke," and was deeply loved by the Hungarian people. He was a son of the last but one Palatin of Hungary. He was educated in Hungary, as a Hungarian and in the Hungarian spirit. Contrary to the accepted regulations of Austrian court etiquette, Archduke, Joseph's boyhood was passed with peasant boys as his playmates and companions. He entered his father's Hussar regiment in 1845, and saw much active service. On his return from the wars he was made commander-in-chief of the Hungarian "honved," or reserve army, holding this post until his death.

Joseph did much, or tried to do much, for the gypsies of Hungary. He mastered the gypsies of Hungary. He mastered the gypsy language and wrote an excellent grammar of this most difficult tongue. He tried to settle the question of gypsy vagabondage by offering to any gypsy who wanted to settle down a patch of land, a good home and help in making a start as an agriculturist. All these efforts, however, were in valn.

In memory of a son, who died as the result of a shooting affair, the Archduke and his wife, the Princess Clotlide, of Sexe-Coburg and Gotha, established an institution for the care of crippled children. The loss of a second grown-upchild last year bore heavily upon the Archduke, and ever since he had lived quietly in his country home, "Villa Guiseppi, at Abazzia. He leaves one son, who married the grandaughter of Emperor Francis Joseph, and three daughters.

JUDGE MANN TO

told recently that lands were more valuable than in any other district, and the reason therefor was that this district spent more money for good roads and schools and had more macadamized roads than any other district. He declared that unless some systematic plan of road improvement were adopted all the talk on the subject would prove nothing but hot air.

The speaker then took up the finance The speaker then took up the linances of the State and the increase in revenues in the last four years, to show that the State was no longer too poor to spend more money for better schools and for good highways. The franchise tax, the 1 per cent. tax on the capital stock of corporations, the large increase in revenue under the operation of the Mann bill, the charter tax and the saving in criminal expenses gave a total additional revenue of $\frac{1}{2}\text{0},000$, compared with a few years ago. With one single exception, the reality in the counties has been augmented in value. He estimated that the revenues of the State would afford more than a million dollars for the year 1906, which could be expended for roads and schools. There had been some 'heavy expenses in recent years that would not have to be taken out of the revenues again, among which he mentioned $275,000 for the State Capitol; of the State and the increase in revethe revenues again, among which he mentioned $275,000 for the State Capitol; more than $200,000 for the penitentiary, and $200,000 for the Jamestown Exposition, and others aggregating about one million delibers. million dollars. The State's 3 per cent. bonds were

The State's 3 per cent. bonds were about par, and its credit excellent.

"If I am elected Governor (and I believe from present indications I am goling to be), I would recommend the expenditures of $500,000 for schools and an adequate sum for the improvement of the public highways." (Great applause.)

Wouldn't Lesse Convicts

Wouldn't Lease Convicts.

Wouldn't Lease Convicts.

Judge Mann emphatically announced his opposition to the lease of convicts to the Davis Shoe Company, and declared that the 1,500 convicts in the penitentiary should be worked on the public roads.

The speaker declared that he had no idea of running for Governor until certain newspapers begun prodding him about the Mann bill and the responsibility for it. He expressed the highest regard for his competitors, saying:

"They are both my friends, and I have a high regard for them. The only thing I have against them is that they are after me too strong." (Laughter.) He quoted Mr. Willard's statement about the bad roads between his home and the railway station at Fairfax, and told his hearers that recently he had told Mr. Willard not to worry about that; he (Mann), when elected Governor, would see that these were improved. Speaking of the "laudable ambition" of his opponents to be Governor, he remarked laughingly that some 20,000 men in Virginia were in the same condition. His opponents had charged that he was a man of one idea. When he made his announcement, they changed and charged that he was trying to write the party's of one idea. When he made his announcement, they changed and charged that he was trying to write the party's platform. As a matter of fact, he had made no issues. Issues make themselves, whether a person favored them or not. An issue that affected every household in Virginia could not be kept down.

Taking up the nosition of his opponents on the Mann bill, the speaker charged that Mr. Swanson's answer to the question meant merely that he would keep his oath of office. Mr. Willard favored the Mann bill when it regulated the liquor traffic, and opposed it when it operated to prohibit it. He attacked Mr. Willard's claim that there was no right of appeal from the judgment of a court by an applicant for license, and declared that if appeal were allowed, the applicant would have to wait until the time for which license was wanted was passed. As to the charges that the bill was indefinite, there were thirty-one saloons in the territory affected by the measure and 767 were for rent, closed by w. the question meant merely that he would by how.

Didn't Mean to Reflect.

Didn't Mean to Reflect.

Judge Mann went into some detail in telling how he came to draw and offer the Mann law. It srew out of a court decision involving a liquor license application, in which the courts had held that they had nothing to do with a moral question, nor the question of public policy. He disclaimed any intention to reflect on the judiciary, and laughingly declared that he usually thought a judge was right when he decladed in his favor and wrong when he did not, but that he did not think the judge was corrupt or bad because his ruling was adverse. The germ of the bill was to give the courts the right, and even to require them, to pass upon questions of morals and public policy Hereferred to the introduction in the Legislature of a bill to permit women to carry pistois, and deprecated conditions that made even such a suggestion possible. Since the Mann bill became a law, there had not been to his knowledge a criminal assault in the territory where the Mann bill is operative.

The address of Judge Mann was illus-

The address of Judge Mann was illustrated by several anecdotes, all effectively told and very laughable. In concluding his address, he reviewed his carreer to refute the intimations by some that he was not a Democrat, He definition of the control of the kind you have always Bought Bigusture of the kind you have always Bought Bigusture.

Don't tolerate that "Tired Feeling"!

In the Spring nine out of every ten people are all used up or "run down."

The reason is simple. They lack nerve force. They are tired because their nerves are tired-overworked.

The nerves supply the heart, the stomach, all the organs of the body, with the power to do their work properly. When the nerves are tired and sick, they don't do their work properly, and the result is headaches, dyspepsia, sleeplessness—in a word, you feel used up.

These are signs that you need new vitality, new nerve energy.

Paine's Celery Compound will give you new nerve power by feeding the nerves themselves. It is a tonic for tired Paine's Celery Compound is the prescription of Prof. E. E. Phelps, one of the most famous physicians in the history of American medicine. This famous tonic has stood the test of 18 years. Every physician knows the formula and prescribes it in his practice.

A Great Nerve Strengthener.

"Some time ago I was greatly bothered with nervousness. I had read and heard about Paine's Celery Compound and decided to try some. I did, and was well satisfied with the results: I proved to myself that it certainly is a great nerve strengthener. Yours respectfully."—Arthur Fritz, 1326 8th St., S. E., Minneapolis, Minn. PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

The celebrated nerve vitalizer and tonic

In every community there are druggists who do not seem to realize that it is actually dishonest to substitute an imita-tion for the genuine Paine's Celery Compound.

Have you ever asked a druggist for an article, and had him bring you some other unknown article and tell you it was just as good or better? He was trying to deceive you. He was trying to substitute an unknown article for a known product because he would make a few cents more out of your innocence. In his mind the question of real merit did not enter into the transaction-but the question of a few. cents did.

When you ask for Paine's Celery Compound see that you get the real Paine's Celery Compound, with the picture of the bunch of celery, on the bottle.
